Everyone Can Draw Summer Art Program In Lake Washington District

Emily Gu, 4th grade

Mark Shorr, 4th grade

We are to drawing what phonics is to reading

The overwhelming majority of adults in this country never learned to draw. When asked to draw a house, they draw the same one they drew at age 7. You may know that house. It's the square one with a door in the middle, a window on each side, two lollipop-looking trees in the yard, and smoke curling out the chimney. These adults were never exposed to the basics of fine art. That's what we teach.

Using a variety of media, (oil and chalk pastels, watercolor, markers and colored pencils) young children begin to see the way that artists do, and have fun with individualized, non-competitive lessons. Because our students can see progress, they remain enthusiastic and motivated. You can see some of our students' work in the galleries at artwizards.org

Projects will include animals of all kinds, favorite cartoon and movie characters, mythical creatures, and local landmarks..

Students who are actively involved in the arts are:

- 4 times more likely to be recognized for academic achievement
- 3 times more likely to be elected to class office within their schools
- 4 times more likely to participate in a math and science fair
- 3 times more likely to win an award for school attendance
- And are nearly TWICE as likely to read for pleasure*

And those who draw what they are learning, no matter the subject will remember it many times longer than those who don't *A Report on Community-based Youth Organizations, Shirley Brice Heath, Stanford University and Carnegie Foundation For the Advancement of Teaching, Americans for the Arts Monograph

Art Wizards is the program I wish had been available when I was in school. I really struggled with drawing, and never knew it could be made so easy.
